

Learning Activities

Learning activities may include:

- Attending NANB Board of Directors meeting as an observer
- Attending workshops, seminars, and conferences
- Attending in-services and rounds
- attending workplace presentations
- Participation in specialty practice groups
- Achieving or maintaining CNA specialty certification
- Taking college or university courses
- Independent Internet research or online courses
- Reviewing policies, standards of practice, and practice guidelines
- Reading texts, journal articles, or participating in journal clubs
- Webinars (NANB webinars)
- Self-directed learning modules
- Consulting with practice experts
- Seeking peer feedback
- Shadowing an expert nurse
- Precepting a student
- Mentoring a peer
- Employer Provided Continuing Education (Employer Orientation Program ACLS, Safety Education, etc.)
- Professional Committees (CNA Committee, Professional Practice Councils, NANB Committees)
- conducting research, publishing an article in a professional journal
- giving a presentation or lecture
- developing and/or implementing best practice guidelines
- being a champion for a change project
- Volunteer activities (presentations on health-related topics outside employment such as to seniors groups on medication use; cancer screening, organizing health promotion activities)
- Wondering if an activity qualifies? Ask us here.